

The One that Got Away by Christine and Rebecca

In an organic chemistry reaction, the nucleophile attacks a carbon, and this change leads to a different stereochem.

It's the leaving group, that doesn't get to stay, so in the SN2 it was the one that got away, the one that got away.