ENTERED ACCORDING TO ACT OF CONGRESS, IN THE YEAR 1847
BY GEORGE AND CHARLES MERRIAM, IN THE CLERK'S OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS.

STEREOTYPED AT THE BOSTON TYPE AND STEREOTYPE FOUNDRY.

P R E F A C E .

THE publishers of Webster's larger English Dictionary, desiring to append to it tables prepared expressly for their edition, which should exhibit the correct pronunciation of Scriptural, Classical, and Modern Geographical Names, requested the subscriber to undertake the direction of the work. This service has been performed in the following manner:—

The list of Scriptural Names added by Taylor to his edition of Calmet's "Dictionary of the Bible," has been carefully collated with that prepared by Walker. In those cases in which the pronunciation of Walker differs from Taylor's, Walker's method has been subjoined, or substituted in its place. The methods of Walker and of Taylor generally coincide, and the authority of Taylor has been preferred to that of Walker in those instances only in which Walker's is opposed by the best, and the established usage. The words omitted by Taylor have been added from Walker, and the table, in the number of names and in their pronunciation, is substantially the same with that which usually accompanies Walker's "Key."

The table of Greek and Latin Proper Names contains all the classical names which are found in Walker's table, together with such as are furnished in addition by Trollope, in his edition of Walker's "Key," and by Thomas Swinburne Carr, in his "Classical Pronunciation of Proper Names." A few have also been taken from Guly's "Encyclopedia of Classical Antiquities," and from Freund's "Dictionary of the Latin Language."

This table has been revised by Professor Thacher, of Yale College. In conducting this revision, he found necessary to correct numerous errors, especially in the division of words into syllables, which, from errors of the press, a confusion of principles, and a want of care in the application of the rules, have been accumulated in other published tables of Proper Names. It will be seen, on noticing the changes which have been introduced, that the aim has been to remove all inconsistencies in the application of the rules of pronunciation which have been adopted by Walker in common with many others.

A few errors of accent have also been corrected, as more recent investigations have ascertained the quantity of some words, which earlier lexicographers, guided only by the general rules of quantity, had given erroneously.

The pronunciation of these names is in all cases determined by the place of the accent, and by the forms of the syllables which the accent determines. To attempt to indicate to the English ear the sounds of the vowels by marks which in classical usage are employed to indicate their quantity, would only lead to confusion, and cannot fail to be especially disadvantageous to students of the languages. The classical table is accompanied by a few rules, designed to guide the scholar in settling those questions of pronunciation which are not answered in the table itself. These rules do not disagree with those adopted in Walker's "Key;" but, in connection with the table, will guide to that pronunciation which is in vogue at the University of Oxford and other learned schools. It is believed that these few rules will be found to be more convenient and useful than the corresponding ones in Walker's "Key."

P R E F A C E.

The same preference will be given, it is believed, to the rules abridged from Walker, which accompany Scripture Proper Names.

The Modern Geographical Names were mostly selected from Black's "General Atlas," (Edinburgh, 1846,) being the latest and best authority. The design of the compiler was, primarily, to present the names of countries, provinces, important towns, rivers, &c., on the continent of Europe and Spanish America, and indicate their pronunciation as perfectly as this can be represented by English sounds. As these names frequently occur in books of all kinds, and occasion great perplexity to the reader and public speaker, and their pronunciation is conformed to that of the languages to which they belong, it was thought advisable to prepare a copious list of words of this character, and to give them the chief place in the table. When the words have been Anglicized, the Anglicized has been subjoined to the native pronunciation.

To these European names many others have been added of places in Great Britain and the United States, in respect to the pronunciation of which, it was thought, information would be esteemed of any value, could be given with any exactness. In a few instances, a provincial, and what will be thought by some, improper, method has been given. It was thought, however, to be impossible and useless to attempt to furnish a complete list of English and American names, with their pronunciation. The pronunciation of the majority of these names is familiar to all, and is never sought for in a dictionary, while that of a very small number can hardly be considered as fixed.

A few names of places in other and ruder countries are given. There are two reasons, however, why it was not thought expedient to swell the list with names of this character. They are, in most cases, the result of an effort to represent native sounds by English spelling. If this representation is imperfect, it is of little authority, and is liable to constant changes. If it is perfect, or nearly so, the pronunciation is indicated by the name itself.

The catalogue of European names was prepared by a gentleman familiar with the countries and the languages in which the names occur; and it is believed that the pronunciation and the accent are as well represented as the nature of the work and the means at hand would allow. No pains have been spared to render this table as complete and convenient as any within reach of the public.

N. PORTER.

YALE COLLEGE, August 10, 1847.

RULES

FOR THE

PRONUNCIATION OF SCRIPTURE PROPER NAMES.

[ABRIDGED FROM WALKER'S KEY.]

1. In the pronunciation of the letters of the Hebrew proper names, we find nearly the same rules prevail as in those of Greek and Latin. Where the vowels end a syllable with the accent on it, they have their long, open sound; as, Nal'bal, Je'hū, Sī'rach, Go'shem, and Tu'bal.

2. When a consonant ends the syllable, the preceding vowel is short; as, Sam'u-el, Lem'u-el, Sim'e-on, Sol'o-mon, Suc'coth, Syn'a-gogue.

3. Every final i forming a distinct syllable, though unaccented, has the long, open sound; as, A'i, A-ri's-a-i.

4. Every unaccented i ending a syllable not final, is pronounced like e; as, A'ri-el, Ab'di-el, pronounced A're-el, Ab'de-el.

5. The vowels ai are sometimes pronounced in one syllable, and sometimes in two; as, Ben-a'ilah, Hu'shai, Hu'rāi, &c.; or, as Sham'ma-i, Shash'a-i, Ber-a'ilah, &c., following in these, as in most Hebrew proper names, the pronunciation of the Septuagint version of the Bible.

6. Ch is pronounced like k; as, Chemosh, Enoch, &c., pronounced Kemosh, Enok, &c. Cherubim and Rachel seem to be perfectly Anglicized, as the ch in these words is always heard as in the English words cheer, child, riches, &c. The same may be observed of Cherub, signifying an order of angels; but when it means a city of the Babylonish empire, it ought to be pronounced Ke'rub.

7. Almost the only difference in the pronunciation of the Hebrew and the Greek and Latin proper names, is in the sound of the g before e and i. In the last two languages, this consonant is always soft before these vowels; as, Gellius, Gippius, &c., pronounced Jellius, Jippius, &c.; and in the first, it is hard; as, Gera, Gerizim, Gideon, Gilgal, Megiddo, &c. This difference is without foundation in etymology; for both g and c were always hard in the Greek and Latin languages, as well as in the Hebrew; but the latter language being studied so much less than the Greek and Latin, it has not undergone that change which familiarity is sure to produce in all languages. The solemn distance of this language has not been able, however, to keep the letter c from sliding into s before e and i, in the same manner as in the Greek and Latin. Thus, though Gehazi, Gideon, &c., have the g hard, Cedrom, Cedron, Cisai, and Cittern, have the c soft, as if written Sedrom, Sedron, &c. The same may be observed of Igeabarim, Igeal, Nagge, Shage, Pagiel, with the g hard; and Ocidelus, Ocina, and Pharacion, with the c soft, like s.

8. Gentiles, as they are called, ending in ines and ites, as Philistines, Hivites, Hittites, &c., being Anglicized in the translation of the Bible, are pronounced like formatives of our own; as, Philistins, Whitfieldites, Jacobites, &c.

9. The unaccented termination ah, so frequent in Hebrew proper names, ought to be pronounced like the a in father. The a in this termination, however, frequently falls into the indistinct sound heard in the final a in Africa, Etna, &c.; nor can we easily perceive any distinction in this respect between Elijah and Elisha; but the final h preserves the other vowels open, as Colhoze, Shi-loh, &c., pronounced Colhozee, Shilo, &c. The diphthong ei is always pronounced like ee; thus Sa-me'u's is pronounced as if written Sa-mee'u's. But if the accent be on the ah, then the a ought to be pronounced like the a in father; as, Tah'e-ra, Tah'pe-nes, &c.

10. It may be remarked, that there are several Hebrew proper names, which, by passing through the Greek of the New Testament, have conformed to the Greek pronunciation; such as Acel-dama, Genezareth, Bethphage, &c., pronounced A-sel'da-ma, Je-nez'a-reth, Beth'pha-je, &c. This is, in my opinion, more agreeable to the general analogy of pronouncing these Hebrew-Greek words than preserving the c and g hard.

Rules for the Quantity of the Vowels.

11. In dissyllables, with but one middle consonant, the first vowel is accented and pronounced long; as, Kō'rah, Mō'lōch. The same analogy is observed in the penultimate of polysyllables; as, Bal-thā'sar.

12. When the accent is on the antepenultimate syllable, the vowel is always short, except when followed by two vowels; thus, Je-hos'a-phat. The secondary accent has the same shortening power when the primary accent is on the third and the secondary on the first syllable; as, Oth-o-ni'as.

Rules for placing the Accent on Hebrew Proper Names.

13. The accent of Hebrew words cannot be better regulated than by the laws of the Greek language. By this it is not intended that every word which is Græcized in the Septuagint should be accented exactly according to the Greek rule of accentuation. For many words, that are purely Greek, do, when they are Anglicized, receive the Latin accentuation, instead of retaining the Greek. When the Hebrew word has been Græcized into the same number of syllables, we prefer the Latin accentuation to what may be called our own. Thus we accent Cathua on the penult, since it comes to us through the Greek Kαθωνά, and because the Latines would have placed the accent on this syllable, and notwithstanding that the English ear would be better pleased with the antepenultimate accent. But when the Hebrew word does not contain the same number of syllables as the same word in the Greek,— as Mes'o-bah, Mes'o-phiā, Id'u-el, Idov'ī-los, — it comes under our own analogy, and we place the accent on the antepenultimate.

14. As we never accent a proper name from the Greek on the last syllable, so, if the Greek word be accented on any other syllable, we seldom pay any regard to it, unless it coincide with the Latin accent. Thus the word Ged-e'rah is accented on the penultimate, because it is Græcized by Γέδερα, though it is accented on the antepenultimate, and this because the penultimate is long, and the long penultimate in Latin always has the accent.

15. All words ending in ias and iah have the accent on the i, without any foundation in the analogy of Greek and Latin pronunciation, except the very vague reason that the Greek word has the accent on this syllable. This reason is called vague, because the Greek accent has no influence on words in ael, iel, ial, &c.; as, Ioga'i, Αἰδηϊά, Beiliu'i, βειλίου. Hence the impropriety of pronouncing Messias with the accent on the first syllable. It is the broad, diphthongal sound of the English i, with the accent on it, which makes the word sound so much better in English than it does in French, or even in the true ancient Greek pronunciation.

16. The termination aim seems to attract the accent on the a only in words of more than three syllables; as E'lphraim, Miz-lāim, have the accent on the antepenultimate, but Horonā'im, Ramathā'im, &c., on the penultimate. This is the general rule; but if the Greek word have the penultimate long, the accent ought to be on that syllable; as, Pharva'im, Φαρώϊμ, &c.

17. Kemuel, Jemuel, Nemuel, and other words of the same form, having the same number of syllables as the Greek words into which they are translated, ought to have the accent on the penultimate, as that syllable is long in Greek; but Emanuel, Samuel, Lemuel, are irrecoverably accented on the antepenultimate, and follow the analogy of the English accentuation.

18. It is plain from these observations, that the Hebrew accent is regulated by a sort of compromise between this ancient language and our own; and the best we can do is to form a kind of compound ratio of Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and English, and to let each of these prevail as usage has permitted them.

PRONOUNCING VOCABULARY

SCRIPTURE PROPER NAMES.

THE basis of the following Vocabulary is that of Taylor, in "Calmet's Dictionary of the Bible." To this have been added several hundred names from Walker. In the cases in which the pronunciation of Walker differs from that of Taylor, that of Walker is added or substituted in its place. The pronunciation of Walker is not always to be preferred, nor is it followed in actual usage by the best authorities. The notation of the vowel sounds may be consulted below.—ED.
